A PEEP AT THE LITTLE ROOM UNDER THE STAGE

Arrival of the Musicians-The Drummer and this Many-Sided Calling-The Trombone's Closet Skeleton-At Last the Leader.

[New York Times.] Underneath the stage, a little to the right of the center, is a small room, to which entrance is effected by a wooden door. furniture of the room consists of a wooden bench running along three sides, a rough wooden table in the eanter, and a few wooden chairs. A piece of cracked looking-glass hangs on the wall close to a flickering gaslight, encased in a wire notting, which does not aid its brilliancy. The side of the room which is not trimmed by the bench is provided with a large wooden closet, whose shelves are loaded with sheets of music and music-books. The air has an odor of ancient beer and stale tobacco. There is no ventilation save what comes through the door when it is open. Presently a footstep is heard German. He is a short, thick-set man, with a sagacious countenance and a broad forehead that would do credit to a statesman. He unlocks the closet and begins to take down some of the music-books. This, then, Is the gentleman whose life is spent in an earnest endeavor to knock the immortal soul out of the bass drum. He likewise plays tha tympani, or kettle-drums, the snare drum, the triangle, the bell harmonica, the child's rattle, the baby aqueak, the champagne popper, the railroad locomotive imitator, telegraph ticker, and the clog dance blocks: and he can, when souls are to be tortured, extract misery from the xylophoue. He is the arsis of music-the acute accent of melody. Ha is likewise the librarian of the

He takes down the parts of the opera which is to be performed and also the score. Piling them up in his arms he ascends a short flight of woodan steps and crawls out of a little door which looks like the entrance to the cuddy of a small yacht. He places each part upon its proper stand, (though he occasionally plays havoc with the first few bars of the overture by putting the first oboe's part on the first cornet's desk), and then deposits the score upon the leader's desk with a loud thump and a grunt of relief. Then he goes over to his own corner—the end of the orchestra on the right of the audience-and examines his various instruments of terture. The snare drum is oraced up and the bass drum is placed in readiness for action. The wcoden covers are removed from the tympani and laid away where they will not interfere with his exactions in the course of the evening. Than he dives down into the band room once more, and brings up his other instruments. This being a genuine comic opera, no burlesque noises are adnnitted, so ha brings up only the triangle and the beil harmonica. There is a sunset scene in the opera, and the composer has, of course, introduced the distant, rhythmic best of the viliage chimes. The drummer, having placed these things in their proper places, disappears once more into a room, It is not a band room.

Presently another man outer the little room under his arm. He deposits the case on the scarf from around his neck. Having unrolled rome half-dozen yards, he folds it carefully, and inserts it in the inside breast pocket of his overcoat. Then he takes off his hat and hange it on a hook in a corner. Next he slowly, and with many a grunt, divests himself of his overcoat, which he spreads upon the table, and carefully folds up, afterward laying it tenderly away on the top shelf of the closet. Then he produces from an inner pocket a pipe and a bag of tobacco. He fills the pipe, lights it, and sits lown for a comfortable smoke. Ha is a thin, weak-looking man. Something appears to have been wasting his physical forces. His face is pinched and his neck is a mass of swollen vains and enlarged cords, Who is he? What it hel Presently he draws a piece of chamois skin from his pocket, and then opens the black case and brings forth his instrument. The secret is out i - He plays the bass

Poor feliow! He immediately gazes at the instrument and beaves a deep sigh. He is thinking, no doubt, of what might have been. He is suffering from the mental agony of a man who realizes too late ha has chosen the wrong path in life. If he had only had some kind friend to advise him in his youth, some me to warn him of the pitfall into which he was walking, some one to tell bim to choose the humido but cheerful province of a second fluto player, with his piccolo by his side and his frequent intervals of semibreve rests! But alone in the world, in the blind enthusinsin of youth, he chose the lass trombone and has ever since been slowly but surely blowing the breath out of his body and soul nto eternity.

Then come the clarionet players, sleek, comfortable-baking fellows, who play a difficult instrument, but a satisfying one. For have they not solor of ourpassing beauty and cade: 21. of rare brilliancy to soothe them! An I love they not, moreover, the deep satisfaction of playing in A. B flat, or C. comes the obos. He is another sad-eyed, inclanded; wight. And well he may be. All his lite he has been pursuing a fleeting shadow-quire, mellow tine. Vainly has he t iven to find the soul of his lustrument, but can not. He would be satisfied if he knew that his oboe had no soul, but ains! ho has beard Elier.

The corners soon drop in presumptuous, self-assured men. They know that they can from out the rest of the orchestra, having frequently tested the power of their own embouchure The first and second trombones, quiet and unobtrusive men; the second violins, sad and disappointed with life; the violas, ashamed of the inward consciousness that they cannot more than half play their wn indruments and yet eager to shine forth in Berlioz's "Childe Haroll" symphony; the 'celio, un artist and a wit; the horn, fearful of slips and reminiscent of one perfect performance of that ilread pasage in the "Eroica," tal the double bass, big and strong as an ox, all stroli in one by one as the hour of 8 approaches. The first violing, reif-important, accomplished inusician-, jovial companions, and marvelous consummer of beer, bounce in at almost the last minute and begin to crack jokes at the ex-pense of the drummer, who has by this time returned. At the very last moment the conduct ir, who has tarried a few moments on the stage to call the teuor's attention to a sad blunder which he made on the previous night, Tushes into the room and throws off his hat and overcoat.

The icader, in full evening dress, draws on his white gloves. At this moment a bell in the corner of the room is violently rung. The musicians rise, crawl out through their little door, and take their seats. The first coronet sounds his A, the clarionets and flutea do likewise, and forthwith, for a minute, there is a panilemonium of scraping, as the strings get onie you. For sale by Penny t Allster.

semi-Wetkly Interior Journal themselves into tune. Then, as all settle back into silence, the leader issues from the little door and takes hie seat. He mises his baton and taps sharply with it on his deak. Then ha casts a glance around him to see If all are ready, and numbles toma German which, being translated, is: "Two in a bar, gentiemen." Then he taps again with the baton, and, raising it aloft, poises it over his head while he glauces around at his men. Every bow is raised, every wind instrument is at its player's line, and the drummer's sticks are elevated above the head of the larger kettle drum tuned in A. The leader's head lurches suddenly forward, his baton descends swiftly and emphatically, and all the instruments burst simultaneously into the grand tutti with which the overture begins,

A NEW CREMATORY TEMPLE.

The Corner-Stone Laid and the Building

To Be Ready In February. Thirty men and two women climbed the muddy slopes of Mount Olivat, L. I., the other day, to lay the corner-stone of the new crematory temple. The structure was already finished to the ground level. On the occasion Professor Felix Adler, one of the directors in the naw company, spoke of tha sanitary benefits of Incineration. Every he went to the cemetery, he said, he was more and more impressed with the loathsome nuhenlthiness and decay consequent upon earth hurial. It was proand a man enters hastily. He throws off ductive of disease and pestilence. Professor his overcoat, hangs up his hat, and mumbles Adler thought that poetic imagery had much something like an oath in very wry-necked | to do with the tenacity with which men clung to the custom of putting their dead into the ground. Poets and singers referred to the grave as an abode of rest, a bed of final repose, a place of shelter, thus throwing a false glamor over the hideous reality. Nowadays, he said, an resthetic sense revolted against earth burial. Our bodies are the garments of intelligence, the homes of the spirit, and should not be permitted to gradually putrefy.

Speaking of the axpressed fear that people might be cremated when life was in the body, he advised that an autopsy be held before incineration to satisfy doubting lawyers and physicians. For his part he had rather die under the knife than awaken under ground. Taking a moral view of cremation, he thought it would be well to have the ashes of departed ones before us in churches, either in niches along the walls, or in a receptacle behind the aitar, "to remind us of the trusts we have inherited from past generations." Cremation would do away with all the gloomy blackness of the pall which now surrounds death.

With good luck the company expects to cremate its first body next February in the largest retort in America. It is improved in many respects over the Le Moyne furnace in Pennsylvania. Twenty dead bodies are now awaiting its completion to be reduced to ashes. The cost of cremation in each case will be from $10 to $25. The cost of the building will be about $1,900. The land cost $2,800.

The edifice is designed as a modified Grecian temple of brick and marble, forty by seventy-two feet. The basement will contain, in the rear, the furnace, which will be constructed chiefly of fire-brick, and will by adapted to coke, with a regenerator. The incluerating chamber will consist of retorts, which will exclude all fuel and llame from contact with the body, and from which the rolatile products of the incineration will be carried into the furnace for recombustion. Incineration will take place at a temperature of about 2,500 degrees Fahrenheit. It will require about forty minutes per 100 pounds of the subject, and will leave about 4 per cent, in waight of a pure pearly ash. No smoke will be visible and no odor percepunder the stage. He carries a fat, black case | tible during incineration. The ba ement will also contain a refrigidarium, where bodies he kent s rivai of friends from a distauce; also a caii darium for cases of possibly suspended animation, the high temperature of which will induce speedy evidences of life or death, as the case may be. There will be, also, in the basement an adicularium, or urn room, and an atelier. This last will be used also for making autopsies, which will be required in all cases wherein it is not clear that denth is not the result of natural causes. The body of the building, or the ground floor, will be fitted up as a chapel, where any service desired may be held. In the central aisle of this chapel, directly in front of the iectern, will be a permanent catafalque, within which the body will be placed, and hidden from view by a pail falling from a frame above. Thence the body will descend hy an elevator to the inciderating room, and the service and incineration will proceed simultaneously. The office and receptionrooms will be on the main floor, in front of the auditorium and on either side of the "estibule.

How Marriages are Made in Brittany. [St. James' Gazette.]

The Bretons of Penza and the adjoining parishes have, according to one of the French papers, a Michaelmas custom which reuders them quite independent of the musical and erpsichorean aids to matrimony found so Beful in Vienna. On Michaeimas Day ali he young women in the district who desire o enter the marriel state as emble on a parzicular bridge, tricked out in all their finery, and take their seats on the parapet. The sligible young men from l'enze and the neighboring parishes presently make their appearance on the scene. They scan the features of the seated daniels; tender glances are exchanged; and when nt length a swain has fixed his choice on a particular nymph, he approaches her and offers i.e. his hand to selp her to the ground. If she accepts his hand for this particular service she accepts it for life. The parents are never very far ill on these occasions, and if they raise no dijection, the young couple shake hands and the wedding soon fellows.

WILL YOU SUFFEE with Dyspepals and Liver Complaint? Shiloh's Vitalizes is meranteed to BRITISH GREAT GUNS.

WHAT ONE MAY SEE AT WOOLWICH ARSENAL, ENGLAND.

Hundred Acres of Magazinas and Foundries - The Gnn Factory-An Eighty-Oae-Ton Infant - Famous Old Cannon.

[Frank Yeigh in Detroit Free Press.] In some way or other the secretary of war overlooked me when in London, but it was only necessary to drop him a line at his headquarters in I'aii Mail to receive a prompt raply in the shape of a formal document notifying me that the war department had ordered the Wcolwich amenal authorities to admit me to that establishment. The ride down tha river in a penny boat-passlng under London bridge, over the tunnel and by Billingsgate, Greenwich and Biackwell-took about an hour. Reaching the massive iron gate of the arsenal, a committee of reception, composed of five as handsome policemen as aver snored against a iamp post, had thoughtfully been provided one of whom led ma into an office, where was invited to sign my autograph-a simple request that I always accode to.

Once Inside the hundred acres of magazine; and foundries surround the visitor in bewildering profusion. Hare and there odd little trains of cars drawn by odd little en-gines went winding among the shops on nar-row guage tracks. To the right of the main roadway was the cap factory, the shining explosives pouring in streams from the swiftly-working machines like wheat from a fanning mill. Adjoining stool the bullet department where thousands of leaden pills of all shapes and sizes were being fashioned, scores of boys manipulating the molds. In succession came the laboratory for making cartridges and projectiles, the gun carriage and wagon departments, each occupying immense long buildings. Workmen in large quads were averywhere, in fact, about 0,000 are employed in the works.

The center of attraction is the gun factory, established nearly 200 years ago by a German. What monarchs of mechanism were being fashloned by the hand of man!enormous tritons, destined for a deathicaling service. From the glowing cauldron of fire-a hissing shrine-the swarthy workman, with distended sinews and powerful muscles, carried the ill-shapen wrought Iron masses, simmering with a heat as condensed as that from which it came, and laid then on an iron bed. The building trembles as the mighty trip-hammer— tha largest in the world—descends and solidi fies and shapens the cooling metal. At last solid piece of iron of the requisits langth and thickness is complate and lithen removed to another foundry on powerful trucks where, resting in a semi-circular had large borers slowly but surely chisel out the center, while the exterior is rounded and smoothed by lumense knives. Finally it is placed among its comrades in the yard where literally thousands of others-field pieces and mortars, howltzars and amouth bores, eighteen-pounders and eighty-oneconners-lay strewn around-a vast armament giving one a startling idea of the horrors of "grim-visaged war."

The eighty-one ton infant, stretching to length of twenty-seven feet, lay peacefully at the antrance to the gun foundry, as docile and harmless in his mental grandeur as a stranded whate. But let that gaping, ominous mouth once speak; let it but utter a single hissing eyllabie, and death and destruction are the result. A trial of the great gun was made at Dover. Four men rammed down a gigantic charge of 450 pounds of powder. At a given signal a dense volume of smoke, preceded by a blinding flash, startled the assembled crowd. A few moments after and the projectile, weighing 1. 700 pounds, struck and ploughed up the water et a calculated distance of four miles. The recoil of the gun carriage was no less than even feet. The doors and windows of the infrounding houses rattled, others shook to their foundation; the large panes of glass in the light-house were blown out-and the grim old monster subsided.

I wandered for an hour or more among the warlike derolicts, huddled together by the hundreds in out-of-the-way corners, sinong pyramide of cannon-balls, chalu shot, mckets and shrapnels. Some had seen service-old veterars, rusty, smoke-begrimmed and crippled. In a solitary corner lay a group of Florentine guns of 1750; near by was a long, slender cannon cast in 1677, while beyond it ware seen reversi pieces of ord-ance from India and the Crimea. Famous and war-tried cannon are treated with great respect. The White Tower in London is surrounded with a curious collecfon of old cannon, some of very beavy calher and highly decorated. One was cast at Valta in 1773, with exquisite reliefs on the barrel, and two brass guus taken by Gen. Woife at Quebec are among the number.

Mounted high ou the parapet of old Edinboro's castla-tha king's bastlon-and over looking the wonderful panorama of city and country and sea, lies Mons Megs, the famous piece of ordnauce which is said to have been lorged at Mons in Beiglum in 1470. James IV employed it at the siege of Dumbarton in 1489. It burst when ifring a salute in honor of the duke of York in 1682; was renoved to the Tower of London in 1754, and was restored to Scut and through the intervestion of Scott in 1920.

Windsor eastle possesses a few oid-timers as well, the most prominent being the protruiling head of a cannon surmountng the flights of stairs loading to the sumant of the Round Tower and commanding s uil swoop down to the dor rway.

The Little Chance.

[New York Tribune.] How smail a chance stands between success and defeat is iliustrated in the statement of a gentleman who stood by Mr. Biaire at the Fifth Avenue hotel during the now famous ministers' meeting. "Just as the last speaker before Dr. Burchard made his peroration, the assembly, tired of hearing from their own number, began to call for Mr. Blaine. 'He had cleared his throat, stepped down a couple of steps on the stairway and was just about to open his mouth for utterance, when some gentieman spoke up, 'Just a moment, brethren; iet us hear a ingle word from the oldest paster of the city, Dr. Burehard, and then from Mr. Bin ne, Courle y could not do less than sul mit. While lir. Burchard was speaking, Mir. Blaine was evidently meditating on what he himself should say, and I should judge did not hear distinctly the famous and infamous alliteration. It was uttered in an indistinct way so that those right alongside the speaker did not catch its import, but only those directly in front of
